the accidental anthropologist is a fascinating impeccably written memoir or more accurately a series of fragments compelling and absorbing as well as intense and insightful jackson writes a far from classically auto biographical text there is nothing predictable about the mode or incidents he has chosen to write about this is literary memoir at its best and most inventive jackson has a fascination with the concept of personal metamorphosis the idea that a life can be dismantled and reassembled in a different country and set of relation ships and throughout the story the author makes a pretty good fist of living the theory the intimacy of the first chapter intensive care engages the reader immediately jackson s experiences begin with his earnest portrayal of young adulthood in wellington where he associates on the fringes with many of the literary figures of the early 60s bob lowry fleur adcock james k baxter r a k mason and the artist mccahon jackson finds himself homeless in london where he s drawn to help the poor and eventually finds his way to cambridge where he stumbles upon anthropology his subsequent ethnographic fieldwork takes him to the congo sierra leone and outback australia jackson makes it clear that our lives are barely our own they belong as much to the people the landscapes the influences of thought and ideology that absorb us he excels at the intensely personal and captivates with this masterful work the accidental anthropologist is a challenging and magnificent memoir much of it is spellbinding astute and disquieting the extraordinary and much requested first volume of cendrars autobiography this account chronicles the author s exploits in the foreign legion including the loss of his arm before the narrative sets off across continents from africa to south america cendrars encounters everyone from gallic gipsies to piquita the mexican millionairess and to all his encounters he brings the vitality savage humor and vivid observation that characterize his dazzling writing
