bachelor thesis from the year 2007 in the subject didactics history grade a university of cape coast department of arts and social sciences education dassse course project for history language english abstract knowledge of one s heritage is one of the most cherished ideals in a society this creates the awareness of how the people lived in the past the way they dressed the way they danced the food they ate their economic resources and how they passed on the above cultural values to their future generations in many african indigenous settings for instance the cultural heritage such as festivals religion languages spoken and even the type of education they practiced all have their meanings and have evolved from the past it is therefore obvious that to understand the present we must definitely know the past it is only based on the knowledge of the past that we can predict the future and live fruitful lives based on the past circumstances the primary aim of history teaching in africa is to put the african child into the stream of history from which he has been absent for so long people do not accord it the necessary attention it deserves this is fundamentally due to the little importance attached to it consequently students are not aware of their past and yet they seemed not to be perturbed a questionnaire was administered to 180 respondents were randomly sampled from three high schools in cape coast municipality of ghana spss was used to conduct descriptive statistics on the data collected from the respondents the results show that students offer history because of their interest in the subject their offering history has nothing to do with advice from parents friends and its easiness as a subject of study unfortunately the resources available in the three high schools are awfully inadequate the predominant teaching method is a combination of lecture method dictation of notes and the use of visual aids and the discussion method however another equally important methods such as excursion were not being employed in the teaching of history this may be due to financial constraints and lack of cooperation from the schools administration it is therefore recommended that history as a subject should be made compulsory for at least a year in the high schools the government must also resource teachers to deliver the subjects using all the necessary teaching methods teachers of the subjects should also improvise in the face of lack of resources in teaching the subject the ghana association of science teachers covers all the syllabus and is fully in line with curriculum objectives it distils the experience methods and knowledge of some of the country s leading teachers examiners and curriculum specialists especially those responsible for the new syllabus it follows a rational teaching plan throughout the three years covering the syllabus in the sequence recommended and approved by the educational authorities and it provides all the teacher needs for theory practice project work further study exercises and examples the chapters that follow are an attempt to select the significant and vital findings in educational research in science teaching and apply these studies in terms of classroom experience
